New Screen Magazine
No. 97

ANDURADHAPURA, Ceylon, once a great metropolis, is to-day a series of artificial lakes. The present inhabitants are Tama immigrants from South India and are Buddhist believers.

Making mechanical dolls and animals has reached a high stage of development. This is illustrated with wonderful specimens of dolls and animals.

A young man, scion of a "blue-blood family" of wealth, has found an enjoyable hobby in chasing the elusive butterfly. He mounts the captured insects into frames which make attractive den decorations.

New Screen Magazine No. 97 closes with an amusing animated entitled "Sammie White Presents Himself in 'A Day of a Dog's Life.'"
